MONICA BARONE

Monica Barone has lived in Sydney for the past nine years holding senior management positions with the Warringah, South Sydney City and City of Sydney government authorities.

As the Director of Community Living for South Sydney then the City she has been instrumental in fostering the cultural vibrancy of the region. She also developed and implemented much needed community and social services projects in the childcare, homeless, affordable housing, drug and alcohol, aged care and community library areas.

During her career Monica has promoted the importance of the private sector in partnering with government to support or deliver services and projects across all areas of service – be it arts, construction or waste services. She has strong links with business through her role in managing the City's major cultural and event sponsorships and representing the City on various governing boards and committees, and her experience with large budgets and financial controls are reflected in her emphasis on fiscal responsibility and innovative approaches to delivering services to the community.

In 2006, Monica became CEO of City of Sydney.

As our second special guest for 2007, Monica will be speaking on:

“Creating the Sydney of the Future: How People can Change Cities - Sydney 2030”
