Cirquinox '10 The Blue Mountains' very own circus festival

Get ready for a day of aerial acrobats, clowns, juggling and non-stop action. Cirquinox is back for another year, and it is bigger and better than ever.

Cirquinox 2010 is the Blue Mountain's very own circus festival, and it's the perfect family day no one should miss.

Held in the picturesque surrounds of the Norman Lindsay Gallery, there is something for everyone with entertainment continuing throughout the day.

Be entertained by the roving performers see acrobats trapeze and fly high above. Witness award winning performances or get involved yourself. You can have a hand at juggling, or a twirl on the hula-hoop. And let the kids play on the jumping castle and have their faces painted.

A variety of food and drinks will be available throughout the day at the event.

The festival began back in 2006 in an attempt to give local circus and physical theatre performers a chance to show off their talents in their own community. The festival also gives local residents a chance to see national and international street performers.

Each year, the event has grown in popularity, attracting both locals and tourists. It truly is a day not to be missed.
